

Graduate Acoustic Consultant London

Scotch Partners is a multi-disciplinary engineering consultancy based in London. Our Acoustics Group has a wealth of experience across all sectors in architectural and building acoustics, environmental noise, and vibration. Our increasing workload presents an opportunity for growth, and we are seeking a motivated graduate to join the team. We work closely together, sharing experiences and ideas freely, to the benefit of everyone.

Job Description

You will be an integral part of the team and be expected to actively contribute to our success. Your responsibilities will include planning and undertaking acoustic surveys at locations throughout the UK, data analysis, and technical reporting. You will also be client-facing, presenting acoustic advice to architectural design teams and colleagues. We will support you as you develop into a fully-rounded acoustic consultant, and you will become familiar with all aspects of the consultancy role.

The job will initially be office-based in Holborn, with opportunities for remote working as you develop.

Must haves:

- An undergraduate degree (this does not necessarily need to be in acoustics)
- Willingness to occasionally work outside of normal office hours and stay away from home
- Technically minded with good maths skills
- Excellent writing and communication skills in English
- Willingness to travel around the UK
- Full driving license
