Job Role Description

You will be working as part of our building acoustics team, collaborating with our thermal & daylighting modellers and BIM coders. Project types will focus on low carbon; large scale residential, arts and educational buildings. You will be responsible for everything from fee writing, design specifications, modelling, acoustic and vibration measurements, calculations, reviewing and preparing drawings, as well as working with clients and developing your own client base. You will be required to attend design team meetings and provide clear information in the form of reports, visual and audio simulations.

Leadership will be an important aspect of this role, providing management and support to develop staff and working methods. MACH is a team and therefore we are looking for individuals with a supportive approach.

MACH Group

MACH has a reputation for thinking differently, with fast growth and imaginative designs. This difference comes from our diverse and adaptive staff, doing what they love. Our innovation comes from our team of software coders, architects, M&E, daylighting, thermal and acoustics engineers. The team is around 25 strong, where we work, learn, innovate and grow together.

We are now recruiting as we need additional consultancy to support new London based projects, where a sizeable number of these projects have values in the order of £150M.
